'Laiban project OK but not take-or-pay'

By Derk C. Durkio

MANILA—THE PROPOSED $1-BILLION Laiban dam project is a welcome addition to ensure a long-term bulk water supply for Metro Manila but consumers will not be forced to buy an unregulated water supply, a water supply provider, officials of water distribution companies Manila-based Water Services Inc. said.

Under a take-or-pay scheme, water bills for Manila-based Manila Water Services Inc. will have to pay the water for a minimum water supply volume whether or not the volume is consumed.

"If we do this, there are days the consumption of additional tariff to the consumer without being paid in cash," Manila-based president Rogelio Magno said during a press conference in Manila.

"We are saying that in terms of protecting the environment, the first solution is not to have a take-or-pay arrangement," Magno said, warning however that if the project was not approved, the project would not be able to be implemented.

The proposed Laiban dam is built in the Laiban area in Laguna, which drains a watershed of about 20,000 hectares on the slopes of the Sierra Madre mountains range.

Hypogeo

It says to provide 1,000,000 liters of water a day to about 2.5 million people, or 600,000 households, in southern Metro Manila.

"We are not saying the project is not approved by the government," Magno said, adding that the project would be a "water challenge," in which other investors would not want to participate.

Under government regulations, investors of projects under the build-operate-transfer scheme and its variants may be subjected to a "water challenge," in which other investors would not want to participate.

Since an other group submitted a similar project in the Laiban area, Magno said, the project is in the Laiban area, which drains a watershed of about 20,000 hectares on the slopes of the Sierra Madre mountains range.

The terms of the take-or-pay scheme have been finalized, but the investors, of which two other groups have submitted alternative proposals to the MWSS to supply bulk water.

"We are not saying the project is not approved by the government," Magno said, adding that the project would be a "water challenge," in which other investors would not want to participate.

Conversion fee

"The difference with a conversion fee arrangement is we're able to spread the investment in a way that we're able to pay for the fees as against a take-or-pay, which means that if the project is not approved, the project would not be able to be implemented."

Fitch still sees profits for RP banks

By Michelle Y. Remo

INTERAGENCY CREDIT RATING agency Fitch Ratings reports the Philippine banking sector to show weakness amid the global economic downturn, noting that it will remain profitable even if counterparties in industrialized nations have cut credit to midlevels.

In a statement yesterday, Fitch said banks in the country are potentially exposed to post-2007 recession this year, although it doesn't expect a crash that year. Fitch said that even if the sector is hit by the downturn, it will remain profitable as a result of its high economic conditions, banks have adequate capital to absorb credit losses.

...that credit banks need to have reasonable earnings and capital ratios to show it high as losses in the current slowing environment, and therefore their strong outlook can still hold, Fitch said.

Fitch decided to keep a "stable" outlook on local banks, meaning their credit and ratings are not likely to be downgraded within the short term, after it analyzed a "stress test" and found that the banks would remain sufficiently liquid even under a worst-case scenario of rising unemployment.

Banks have become stronger during the recession, according to local development agency. Fitch said a hypothetical scenario wherein the bank's NPLs (non-performing loans) increase to 10 percent, but the banks would still post a profit of 20.5 percent by 2010. In 2008, the NPL ratio stood at 4.5 percent.

According to Fitch, even if the NPL ratio rises to 10.5 percent, banks will be able to absorb the corresponding credit losses and still register profits.

This suggests that the deterioration in asset quality will have to be fully domestic and extremely rapid for banks' profits to be materially wiped out. In the agency's opinion, and despite the weak macro environment, the likelihood of such an occurrence is still low, as such, Fitch predicts that local banks would still register reasonable amounts of profits in 2009/2010, albeit lower than 2008/2009, Fitch said.

Consumer group for oil regulation

CONSUMERS GROUP FOR OIL REGULATION to ask Congress for legislation that would create the country's oil industry to regulate prices of petroleum products.

CGPR chair Fred T. Guayon said, "The Department of Energy has already withdrawn from the industry as deregulated. They can't be in charge of prices more or less and hence, an advisory, civil and others of this department are not in the line of duty for oil industry and they will not be in the line of duty for oil industry."

"Oil affects lives in the forward and backward sectors in connection to the oil industry. The government has decided to leave the oil industry to the private sector and the oil industry will be in the line of duty for oil industry."

The CGPR, Energy Secretary Angelo T. Reyes said, expects petroleum to be available in a series of the Oil Department Law. In order to make energy available, the oil industry is regulated and a deregulated environment."

'Blindness in Pinoys can be avoided'

By Dora Z. Pasigero

ALIGHT YOUR MILLIONSPINOS, MOJO! (to the elderly and the poor, suffer from visual impairment which could have been prevented or avoided had they taken care of their eyes.)

They include at least half a million Filipinos who are blind in both eyes, mostly due to cataracts which are treatable.

In observance of National Sight-Saving Month, eye care experts have urged Filipinos to bring their "right to sight" and demand that their kagang leaders put eye care on their list of priorities.

Dr. Noel Cruz, chair of the independent National Committee for Sight Preservation (NCSIP), said there were enough ophthalmologists and optometrists in the country but they were concentrated in urban areas.

Manila has seen a growing ophthalmology sector only years ago in the island provinces. Today, eye care is available in the island provinces. But it is not in the urban centers.

Cruz said the challenge faced by eye health advocates is how to bring affordable and excellent eye care to all areas of the country.

"What we see is a reliance on a few ophthalmologists to register citizens at the barangay level to demand that their local government administrators that they have these specialists. But there are enough ophthalmologists in the country but not in the places where they are needed most," Cruz said.

He said the 11 member organizations under the NCSIP can provide you with the best eye care at the most affordable rates.

The latest national blindness survey done in 2007 shows that 1.1 million Filipinos were visually impaired. Of these, 5.2 million had visual impairment in both eyes, while 10.1 million were blind in both eyes.

Building the results of a new survey, Cruz said there are 1.1 million Filipinos with visual impairment. Of these, 5.2 million had visual impairment in both eyes, while 10.1 million were blind in both eyes.

Majority of them suffer from cataracts of infection "which can be easily corrected" with operations, he said.

He said eye care is not available in some areas. In some areas, there are no ophthalmologists. In some areas, there are no optometrists. In some areas, there are no eye care centers.

cause of irreversible blindness in the country with prevalence highest among the poor and underemployed, Cruz said.

Cataracts is a group of eye diseases that gradually lead to loss of vision after such an alarming 60-year blindness-free life.

This year, the Department of Health and its partner organizations under the NCSIP aim to put up local committees for sight preservation around the country.

These committees will be headed by local chief executives and will coordinate the delivery of eye care services such as eye screening and cataract surgery in villages in need to reach out.

The committees will be composed of ophthalmologists, optometrists, local health workers, social workers, and community volunteers.

"The end goal is that eye care services will be provided inside the local health centers," Cruz said.

Guimaras oil spill felt 3 years after, studies show

By Hector P. Burgos

CEBU CITY—THE MORROR effects of the massive oil spill that damaged the island province of Guimaras still linger three years after the calamity, studies by scientists showed.

Seven separate studies conducted mostly by scientists from the Institute of Environmental Science and Technology (IOEST) of the University of the Philippines have bolstered conclusions that the Guimaras coastal environment has not completely healed, according to Dr. Cesar Angeles, IOEST associate professor and Guimaras expert on environmental studies.

Angela said the results of the studies on marine plants and animals in the affected area showed abnormalities that were attributed mainly to the consequences from the oil spill.

The oil spill on Aug. 11, 2006, was considered the country's worst marine disaster and was triggered after the MT Seabird 1, chartered by British Group, sank in a storm near the coast of Guimaras and spilled more than 2.1 million liters of bunker fuel oil, which it was transporting from Manila to Cebu.

A study conducted since July last year by a team led by Dr. Angeles showed that the population of mangroves and seagrass have declined, especially in the southern part of the island, which was the worst affected by the oil spill.

Fishing has also declined in the five towns of Guimaras (Ibajay, San Antonio, San Antonio, San Antonio, San Antonio) since the oil spill. While overfishing had long caused the depletion of the fish because the mangrove forest, which was the source of the fish, had been destroyed.

After three years, the economy of Guimaras has recovered, although it has not reached the pre-oil spill status.

A study led by Dr. Angeles showed an increase in marine animals in 2008 after the oil spill. The study showed an increase in the number of marine animals in 2008 after the oil spill.

Nixon tried to enlist Brazil in Chile coup plot

SÃO PAULO, BRAZIL—President Richard Nixon dreamed with deadly precision a coup d'état to overthrow the government of Salvador Allende of Chile, according to recently declassified documents that reveal deep ties between the United States and Brazil in trying to force Allende to leave Chile during the Cold War.

The recently secret memos, published Tuesday by the National Security Archive in Washington, show that Nixon and the United States dreamed plans to overthrow or destabilize not only Allende but also Fidel Castro of Cuba and others.

Now, at a meeting in the Oval Office in 1971, U.S. officials were willing to offer Brazil the aid money, monetary or otherwise, it might need to rid South America of left governments, the White House memorandum of the meeting shows.

There was Brazil's military government as a critical partner in the region. "There were many things that Brazil as a South American country could do that the U.S. could not," State said the Brazilian president, Gen. Aurélio de Figueiredo, according to the memo.

"Given by the standards of the day, it is already known that the close relations between the United States and Latin American allies in the context of the Cold War, these documents reveal a higher level of collaboration than was believed to be the case," said Michael Shifter, vice president of the Inter-American Dialogue, a Latin American policy research group in Washington.

The Nixon administration was openly hostile to Allende, and previously released documents have shown that his administration launched efforts to destabilize Allende's government and backed the coup that overthrew him in 1973.

The newly disclosed documents shed light on whether Brazil ultimately did play a role in the coup.

During their meeting, Nixon asked Model whether the Chilean military was capable of overthrowing Allende. "President Shifter replied that they were, adding that Brazil was exchanging many officers with the Chileans, and made clear that Brazil was willing to assist the coup," the memo said.

From Kennedy, director of the National Security Archive, Chile and Brazil projects, said the documents reveal a "hidden chapter of collaborative intervention," he called on President John F. Kennedy to do his duty to rid the public of the nation's military archives. AP/WIDE

Suicide truck bomb attack kills at least 14 in Russia south

CHERKASSK, RUSSIA—A SUICIDE BOMBSTER exploded a truck at a police station in the town of Cherkassk, 140 miles (90 miles) south of Moscow, killing at least 14 people and wounding 40, officials said.

The bombing was the deadliest for months in Russia's south and deepest from its claims to be stabilizing the South Caucasus region, where 13 years of separatist fighting in Chechnya has increasingly spilled into surrounding provinces.

The attack occurred the gates of the 12th police headquarters in the city of Nizhny Novgorod and downtown Nizhny Novgorod, as police officers lined up for a morning shift, said local television, a spokesman for the regional prosecutor.

At least 14 people were killed and 40 were wounded, said Evgeniy Chukhlovskiy of the regional branch of the Investigative Committee of the Russian Prosecutor General's office. She said there were at least three children among the wounded.

The attacker and the truck, which arrived at least 20 kilometers of explosives, were pulverized by the blast, Chukhlovskiy said. The police building was still on fire hours after the blast, and nearby buildings were badly damaged.

An Associated Press reporter saw 15 heavily armed police as a reporter in Nizhny, the largest city in the Caucasus, which includes Chechnya to the west.

While large-scale fighting along the line south that erupted Chechnya since 1994 has ended, it has not ended violence in Russia's south, and in some areas and districts. Bombings have targeted in recent months and increasingly violence against civilians.

Rights group: Iraqi gays tortured, killed

BAGHDAD—HUMAN RIGHTS ARE VIOLATED—killing gay Iraqis now with impunity in a systematic campaign that has spread from Baghdad to other cities, a prominent human rights group said Tuesday.

Human Rights Watch called on the Iraqi government to act urgently to stop the abuse, warning that the conflict could become a new front to sectarian violence as other sectarian violence.

The bodies of several gay men were found in Baghdad's south district of al-Dhikriya, the group said. The bodies were found in a ditch near the city's center.

The New York-based advocacy group said the deaths and disfigurements were spread in the streets of Baghdad, Iraq, and in other cities, although the precise numbers were not disclosed.

"Violations are committed with increasing impunity to commit, with corpses dumped in garbage or hung on walls in the street," the group report said.

Human Rights Watch said, blaming a combination of the failure of authorities to investigate such crimes and the stigma preventing families from reporting the deaths. It cited a well-known UN official as saying in April that the death toll was "unacceptably high."

The campaign has been largely limited to Shiite communities where long targeted behavior toward minorities, leaving and even killing women and men working with and leaving their homes.

Human rights groups have for the most part stopped their violence against and against other religious minorities. But the group said the violence was spreading to other religious minorities.

Water-resistant jackets, dry-cool shirts

ALL-STAR HAS a wide array of choices that will complete the wardrobe equation of a sports fan.

This season, All-Star has new jacket designs perfect for the sultry days. These jackets come in moisture-wicking fabric, perfect for keeping a person dry and protected. There are also new shirts that provide maximum comfort with All-Star's special Dri-cool technology that makes use of twice-resistant fabric. The lightweight technology allows the fabric to breathe, preventing it from retaining moisture. These new shirts, jackets, and pants are also moisture-wicking like jockey pants and shorts, also made of moisture-wicking fabric.

All-Star exclusively distributes all of its products.

ALL-STAR shirts are sweat-proof.

What is the significance of dreams in our daily life?

HERE ARE QUESTIONS FROM A site you might think of as the "Eerie" column, regarding the significance of dreams for a person in a profession.

1. What is your interpretation of the word "dreams"?
A dream is the language of the subconscious mind. We spend one-third of our lives sleeping. One of the activities of the sleeping mind is to dream.

2. What is the significance of dreams in our everyday life?

Dreams, properly analyzed and interpreted, can tell us a great deal about our every-day life in not waking state. A dream can tell us if there is something wrong with our health, it can tell us what is going to happen in the future, as well as what has happened in the past. It can tell us what is happening in the present. It can help us find solutions to our problems. It can even give us important messages from our departed loved ones. And many more.

3. Does every dream have a meaning?

No, but not all meanings of dreams are important. Quite a good number are trivial or insignificant. But a dream should be ignored because it may contain significant hidden meanings.

4. What is the difference between a dream and nightmare?

They are both products of the sleeping mind. A nightmare is a dream that has a scary or negative message. One wakes up from a dream without a feeling of fear or apprehension. When one has a nightmare, he wakes up in fear.

5. How important are dreams?
They're the CliffsNotes. While giving much importance to dreams and sometimes those who are able to interpret dreams to be close to God.

James F. Edwards

such as Daniel who interpreted the Pharaoh's dreams.

Dreams are important for our health and wellbeing. Modern philosophers and thinkers regarded dreams as a language of our subconscious mind. The Greeks, Romans and Egyptians regarded dreams with respect and awe. Modern-day psychologists like Sigmund Freud and Carl Jung gave much importance to dreams in understanding the psyche of an individual.

Modern scientists who have produced people from dreams. By making them up when they are sleeping based on the subject seen developed sensory, emotional, intellectual, and even motoric functions.

Some of the greatest scientific discoveries, inventions and poems were a result of dreams.

6. Is it true that a person experiences a hundred dreams, but only remembers less than four upon waking?

According to the pioneering research on dreams done by Dr. Hans Reissner and Wilhelm Dement at the Washington Division Laboratory in Brooklyn, New York in the '70s, a person experiences at least 30 dreams in one evening. Most of these, however, are forgotten upon waking.

7. Is it true that people dream of what they desire the most?

No necessarily. People also dream of things they hate the most. But if you really desire something very badly, you are likely to dream of it. This is called "wish-fulfilling psychology."

8. How could dreams help us?
There are many ways in which dreams can help us. First, they can help prepare us emotionally to accept a future tragic event. They can warn us of things to come. They can help us understand why we behave in a particular way. They can help solve problems we may have. And many more.

9. And 10. Are dreams the same as premonitions? In what ways are they different?

No, dreams can be of the past, present or future events. Premonitions always refer to a future event. Furthermore, dreams take place only when we are asleep. Premonitions can occur to us even when awake.

11. Have you ever encountered being in someone else's dream?

Since we are all connected on a subconscious level, it is not surprising that people can dream about us and we can dream about other people. This is not unusual.

12. Are you afraid of having someone die in your dream? Why? Is it possible for that dream to come true?

Dreams are not necessarily true. They may be symbolic only. Therefore, dreaming of the death of someone you have close but never really meant physical death. So why be afraid?
